Welcome to INCS 2018 San Francisco!

Welcome to San Francisco, a city known for its vivid Victorian buildings (painted in serial layers over decades), its dramatic suspension bridges, and, from the Gold Rush to today’s cryptocurrencies, its vigorous boom-and-bust cycles: a fitting setting for this year's conference theme of Serials, Cycles, and Suspensions! The papers chosen for INCS 2018 SF engage many different forms of serial aesthetics, production, and communication; they explore how temporal and spatial connections and disruptions became organizing principles informing culture and systems of knowledge in the nineteenth century.

Our conference features two keynote talks. On Friday, Shelley Fisher Fishkin’s “Listening to Silence, Seeing Absence: The Challenge of Reconstructing Chinese Railroad Workers’ Lives” and Barbara Voss’s “Material Traces, Transnational Spaces: The Archaeology of Chinese Railroad Workers in China and the United States” offer insight into the Interdisciplinary Chinese Railroad Workers project. Our second keynote is Catherine Gallagher’s “A Tale of Two Cities, or The History of Revenge.” We also have two exciting plenaries: Friday’s roundtable on “Interdisciplinarity and Seriality” and Saturday’s “Beethoven’s String Quartet Cycle: A Musical Diary for Posterity,” a lecture and performance by the Alexander String Quartet.

We are delighted to host the 33rd annual meeting of INCS and to kick off our conference with a celebration of the naming of the essay prize after INCS founder Richard Stein. In 1985, Richard Stein invited fifty colleagues to meet and discuss ideas for collaborating on a Western MLA branch of nineteenth-century studies, a discussion that resulted in INCS. Thirty-three years later, INCS conferences continue to build on the vision of its founders, providing interdisciplinary sessions that bring together multiple perspectives, and limiting conference presentations to summaries of precirculated papers so that discussions can be particularly vibrant, sustained, and productive. Please enjoy the posted papers and the lively discussions we will create this weekend!

KEYNOTES & PLENARIES

KEYNOTES

SHELLEY FISHER FISCHER, “Listening to Silence, Seeing Absence: The Challenge of Reconstructing Chinese Railroad Workers’ Lives.” Shelley Fisher Fishkin is the Joseph S. Atha Professor of the Humanities, Professor of English, and Director of American Studies at Stanford University. Her broad, interdisciplinary research focuses on recovering and interpreting voices that were silenced, marginalized, or ignored in America’s past. Dr. Fishkin is the author, editor, co-author, or co-editor of 47 books and has published over 150 articles, essays, columns, and reviews. Her most recent book, Writing America: Literary Landmarks from Walden Pond to Wounded Knee (Rutgers, 2015), was named runner-up for the best general nonfiction book in the 2015 London Book Festival. Dr. Fishkin has served as President of the American Studies Association and the Mark Twain Circle of America. Her current research includes the collaborative transnational, bilingual Chinese Railroad Workers of North America Project, which aims to recover the experience of the Chinese workers whose labor helped to build Stanford University. The project aims to understand how these workers have figured in cultural memory in the U.S. and China.

BARBARA VOSS, “Material Traces, Transnational Spaces: The Archaeology of Chinese Railroad Workers in China and the United States.” Barbara Voss is Associate Professor of Anthropology at Stanford University. She is a historical archaeologist who studies the dynamics and outcomes of transnational cultural encounters. Dr. Voss is interested in how diverse groups of people, who previously had little knowledge of each other, navigated the challenges and opportunities of abrupt and sustained interactions caused by colonialism, conflict, and migration. She is author of The Archaeology of Ethnogenesis: Race and Sexuality in Colonial San Francisco (University of California, 2008). Her current research focuses on nineteenth-century migration from southern China, which she is investigating through three interrelated projects: the Market Street Chinatown Archaeology Project; the Research Cooperation on Home Cultures of 19th-Century Overseas Chinese; and the Chinese Railroad Workers of North America Project, for which she is Director of Archeology. Her work is guided by a deep commitment to public archaeology and collaborative research. She is also interested in generating productive dialogue between queer studies and archeology.

CATHERINE GALLAGHER, “A Tale of Two Cities, or The History of Revenge.” Catherine Gallagher is the Eggars Professor of English Literature at the University of California, Berkeley. Her teaching and research focus on the British novel and cultural history in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Her books include The Body Economic: Life, Death, and Sensation in Political Economy and the Victorian Novel (Princeton, 2006), Practicing New Historicism, co-authored with Stephen Greenblatt (Chicago, 2000), Nobody’s Story: The Vanishing Acts of Women Writers in the Marketplace, 1670-1820 (California, 1994), and The Industrial Reformation of English Fiction: Social Discourse and Narrative Form (Chicago, 1985). Dr. Gallagher has won two National Endowment for the Humanities Fellowships and a Guggenheim Foundation Fellowship, and she was elected a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 2002. Her current work examines the connections between alternate history novels, counterfactual histories, social policies, and political debates. The project studies how narrative form meets historical ambition, especially during periods of national redefinition.
ALEXANDER STRING QUARTET (SATURDAY PLENARY)

“Beethoven’s String Quartet Cycle: A Musical Diary for Posterity”

The Alexander String Quartet has performed in the major music capitals of five continents, securing its standing among the world’s premiere ensembles. Formed in New York City in 1981, the ASQ was the first American quartet to win the London International String Quartet Competition in 1985. Its home base is now San Francisco, where the quartet serves as Ensemble in Residence of San Francisco Performances and Directors of the Morrison Chamber Music Center at San Francisco State University. Widely admired for its interpretations of Beethoven, Mozart, and Shostakovich, the quartet’s recordings of the Beethoven cycle (twice), and the Bartók and Shostakovich cycles have all won international critical acclaim. The quartet has also established itself as an important advocate of new music through over 30 commissions from contemporary composers such as Jake Heggie, Cindy Cox, Augusta Read Thomas, César Cano, and Wayne Peterson.

INTERDISCIPLINARITY AND SERIALITY (FRIDAY PLENARY)

MICHAEL COHEN, University of California, Los Angeles

Associate Professor Michael Cohen teaches at UCLA, where his research and teaching focuses on nineteenth-century poetry, primarily in the United States, but also across the broader English-speaking world. Professor Cohen examines the ways that people used poems: the means by which they received and circulated them (via books, broadsides, letters, oral recitation, and so on), the reading practices that made up their encounters with them (memorization, group reading, singing), and the theories of genre and media that informed the way they understood poems.

MIKE CRONIN, Boston College Ireland

Professor Mike Cronin has been the Academic Director of Boston College Ireland since 2005. He has published widely on various aspects of Irish history, and is a renowned scholar in the area of sport. He is a regular media commentator on aspects of Irish and sporting history. While at BC, Professor Cronin has developed a series of major public history projects based around Irish topics including the 2008-12 GAA Oral History Project, and since 2013, the major online repository and real time history project for the Irish Decade of Centenaries, Century Ireland.
Kate Flint is Provost Professor of Art History and English at the University of Southern California. Her research and teaching is both interdisciplinary and transatlantic. Her areas of specialization include Victorian and early twentieth-century cultural, literary, and visual history; and the history of photography from its inception to now. Her most recent book, Flash! Photography, Writing, and Surprising Illumination has just been published by OUP, and she’s working on a project that looks at Victorian concerns about making close, attentive observations of the ordinary and everyday, and how contemporary visual artists have taken up these emphases in their own, environmentally self-conscious work.

Anna Gibson, Duquesne University

Assistant Professor Anna Gibson teaches nineteenth-century British literature at Duquesne University in Pittsburgh. Her research focuses on narrative, history of the novel, and Victorian science. Her current book project examines how the formal features of Victorian novels shaped new ways of thinking about human psychology. She is also interested in digital scholarship and pedagogy and is the director of the Digital Dickens Notes Project (dickensnotes.com), which is digitizing and exploring the working notes Charles Dickens kept as he wrote his novels.

Marlene Tromp is Campus Provost and Executive Vice Chancellor at the University of California Santa Cruz and Professor of Literature and Critical Race and Ethnicity Studies. Her work connects contemporary issues to cultural history with a focus on social justice. She is the author of books on Spiritualism, domestic violence, sensation fiction and has edited volumes on xenophobia, freak shows, Mary Braddon, and economics. She has new projects on the Titanic and is at work on a new book, Intimate Murder: Sex and Death in Nineteenth Century Britain.

Alex Woloch, Stanford University

Professor Alex Woloch is Chair of the English Department at Stanford University, where he teaches and writes about literary criticism, narrative theory, the history of the novel, and nineteenth- and twentieth-century literature. He is the author of The One vs. The Many, which reestablishes the centrality of characterization — the fictional representation of human beings — within narrative poetics. His current projects include a book in progress, provisionally entitled Partial Representation, which will consider the complicated relationship between realism and form in a variety of media, genres and texts.

Nineteenth-Century Popular Fiction

The journal of the Victorian Popular Fiction Association (VPFA): www.victorianpopularfiction.org

Editor: Jane Jordan

The journal will include articles on the following topics: the critical rehabilitation of neglected writers, editors and publishers, publishing practices, popular fiction in dialogue with aspects of popular culture, theatrical or film adaptation, the Neo-Victorian re-imagining of nineteenth century popular fiction, debates about canonicity and genre hybridity, digitisation, and, too, the identification of pedagogical issues encountered in the teaching of popular fiction.
